Open-Ended Responses

1. In what ways did your instructor make learning possible for you during the semester?

Comments
I never went to this recitation. Thanks for still having it available for other students
He was extremely patient, took questions thoughtfully, and was excellent at explaining material. He made sure that everyone understood the problems we worked through, and was overall a very passionate, comprehensive, and kind instructor
Caleb Langdon is awesome. He explained all the concepts very clearly to augment and solidify what was taught in lecture. He was very open to questions and would help any student who was struggling. With Caleb, recitations were important part of the course that furthered our learning and prepared us to succeed on exams.
clear solution
He was super engaging, patient and offered multiple ways to understand concepts.

2. Which aspects of this course should be kept for future times this course is taught?

Comments
I don't know if you do already, but you should offer homework help during the first recitation and I believe more people will be interested in continuing to come.
EVERYTHING!! Specifically some of the more fun theoretical stuff, or interesting side tangents from problems. I particularly remember the explanation of quotas and the world price as excellent
All aspects of this recitation course should be kept. Caleb has created the epitome of what an Economics recitation should be.
clear solution
The two to three long problems per recitation. And review before exams.
